Campaign Spending: List of Filers

Ever since his early years of public school experience, Mike Hu has been a leader in the Waikiki-Kapahulu area, single handedly recruiting the Pop Warner football teams and organized basketball league at Paki park and playground in the mid-60s, where he once sat between the better known politicians, Mazie Hirono and Randall Iwase, at Kaimuki High School.

However, after a year at the University of Hawaii, and curious to learn what the rest of the world was like, he spent the next 30 years living and working from coast to coast, and border to border on the US Mainland, before returning again in 1998, during that time, he worked in virtually every field of social and economic concern and activity, including teaching inner city school children with the Teacher Corps, in Louisville, Ky. Then he moved to Boston, Mass., where he was one of the pioneers in adult education, offering his "Scientific Weight-training" course at the YMCA when it was just coming to be popularly accepted.

Throughout his life, Mike Hu has always been on the cutting edge of new ideas and thinking – frequently regarded as one of the leaders of the counterculture movement, and even the Democratic Party. Then in the 2000 presidential debate, he was shocked at the attempts of the favorite Al Gore, to intimidate and insult the challenger George Bush, as behavior no conscientious person should regard another. And that has been the unfortunate trend of politics and the mass media culture he will change.
